Reading is the art of noticing what the author did not say.

Good notes capture the claim, the evidence, and your doubt.

This sentence is underlined in blue by a colleague.

This ~~obsolete sentence~~ was struck out in red.

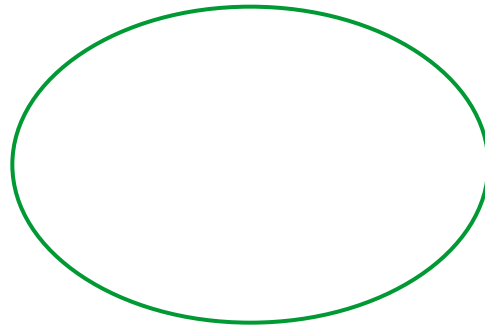

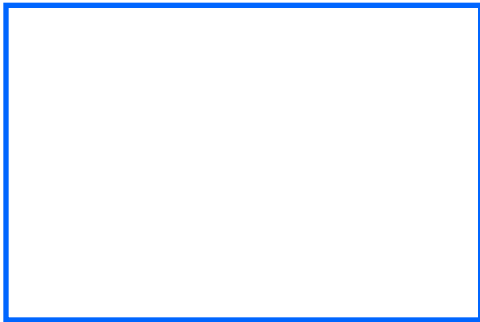

A squiggly line marks a questionable statistic: 73%.

The second highlight spans two lines of text so that the importer must join both quads into one excerpt.

Remember: evidence first!

Page two: drawings and shapes

Ink, boxes, an ellipse, an arrow, a line and a triangle.

A hidden highlight sits on this line.
